New Technology in Sixth Grade

By Shea W. and Zoe C.

Did you know that each sixth grader has a Chromebook to use at school and, as needed, at home? This is a District initiative to provide one-to-one access for sixth grade students. A Chromebook is a cross between a laptop and a tablet, and it runs on the Google Chrome operating system. Chromebooks are used for connecting to the Internet quickly and most of the information is saved to the cloud.

Chromebooks have many benefits that can help us learn, but when used incorrectly, they can be a distraction.

First, the benefits:
Voice typing --

There is a microphone on the top of the screen. Voice typing records and writes what you say. (I'm using it right now!)

Access to Google Drive -- You can use Google Drive to write essays, access documents at home, and share documents with your classmates. Chromebooks are an awesome way to use Google Drive.

Help with homework -- We can bring the Chromebooks home so homework is more accessible. Bringing the Chromebook home allows students without computers to do their homework more easily.

Access the Internet quickly -- Chromebooks are very quick at loading, and you can be on the Internet in seconds.

Bookmarks -- Bookmarks take you right to a website, which saves time when you are doing research. Each student has his/her own Chromebook, so he/she can personalize bookmarks.

Long Battery Life -- Chromebooks can last up to eight hours on a single charge. This allows students to take Chromebooks with them to different classrooms easily.

Swivel camera -- It's fun ... and makes it super easy to take pictures for assignments.

Information at your fingertips -- Chromebooks can help us do research faster because we don't have to go to the library to get a computer.

Spell Check -- Google Drive has spell check, which means that we'll have minimal spelling mistakes.

Now, for the challenges:

Distracting -- It's so easy just to flip to a new tab and open up a game. Then, when the teacher comes by, you go back to the first one and act like you're working (not that we would do that!). The temptation is great.

Spell Check -- Because it corrects misspelled words automatically, students might not learn how to spell words correctly.

Lots of typing -- Students might be good at typing, but might not develop good printing and handwriting skills. Even with computers, we still need these skills.

Cost -- The Chromebooks and chargers are expensive, so you don't want to break or lose them.

We love having Chromebooks at school and we think benefits are greater than the challenges. So other than the great fun, this is one more awesome thing on top of the cool pile that is 6th grade.

Keyboarding Without Tears Starts at Spring

By Sophie I.

Keyboarding Without Tears is a great way for kids to learn how to type quickly without making mistakes. It also features medals each time you complete a different row of keys!

There are different activities for each row of keys. Keyboarding Without Tears really helped me with my typing. The typing games make typing fun for everyone. The screen provides a keyboard so you know what key you are pressing. The green finger is pressing on a home row key.

KWT is a great way to learn, so ENJOY!

Principal's Corner

By Mrs. Webb

Moving students ahead, from wherever they are, is our number one goal. Students play a huge part in this practice as the students have 100% more buy in when they are a part of the process.

We're off to the races! Students are updating their goals and readjusting their strategies, alongside teachers, to make the most progress possible, all the way to the finish line! As you know, moving students ahead, from wherever they are, is our number one goal. Students play a huge part in this practice as the students have 100% more buy in when they are a part of the process. They see the goals or standards. They identify how they are currently doing, according to their unit tests, daily work or other formative assessments, and then they make a plan. This is the same process adults use to make progress in their personal and professional goals. Talk to your child/children to learn about their current goals! Each new set of goals begins a new race!

Next, we are extremely sensitive to kindness and how that looks in all different areas of a student's day. We are very fortunate that students have beautiful manners (most of the time and thanks to you!). However, our unkind actions come in the form of leaving another person out, saying something unkind, showing disapproval to a peer because of what they wear, how they look, how they learn or other differences. These actions are more challenging to spot, but a very definite part of some children's daily lives. When you are worried about being accepted and included, you CANNOT attend to work, feel confident, or make any progress.

What are we doing about this? We have revved up some of the daily routines and practices by mixing kids up at recess, providing more adult supervision at recess, providing close proximity at lunch, seating students in new and different places at lunch, and monitoring partners and other groupings in class. Responsive classroom practices (see www.responsiveclassroom.org) provide us with conversations and activities that help students express their opinions and learn to understand or appreciate others' opinions. We are constantly developing new activities to help students share their feelings, reach out to an adult they trust and talk through issues as they arise. Sometimes, just a moment of time can provide a child with the confidence and clarification they need to "get back in there!" You may even hear about your child having lunch with myself or Mr. Lowrey. These are the times we use to connect with and support our students. But we need your help, too. Please always continue to listen to your child and his or her feelings, help him or her to see other possible perspectives and continue to be the parent that knows your child is not perfect and may be adding to a situation or aggravating a situation in some very small way. This takes constant role playing and modeling by adults and peers. This takes discussion and being able to step out of your shoes to see the whole situation and all the possible perspectives. This takes constant communication between home and school, so feel free to reach out!

Thank you for all you do to help your child/children meet their goals and feel good about learning!

Respectfully, Mrs. Webb

Top Ten Of My Favorite NBA Players Of All Time

By Aidan C.

10. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

This NBA player is amazing! Kareem is the best scorer of all TIME. He invented a shot called the Sky Hook which was almost unblockable!

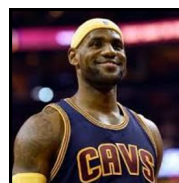

5. Michael Jordan

The greatest of all time. Where do I even start? He won six Championships with the Bulls. He deserves to be the greatest.

9. Ray Allen

No one has hit more career threes than Allen. He won a championship in 2008 with the Celtics and in 2012 with the Heat.

4. LeBron James

LeBron is probably the best player of this generation. He has four MVP awards.

8. Russell Westbrook

He is a great scorer, and he is almost averaging a triple double which is triple points and double assists.

3. Anthony Davis

AD is one of the best blockers of this generation. He's a great dunker.

7. Jimmy Butler

Jimmy Butler is one of the best Bulls players. He worked really hard to be an All Star.

2. James Harden

Harden is a great three point shooter. He uses the Eurostep, which is taking a step in one direction, and then quickly taking a second step in another direction to throw off the other team. He has a Sixth Man of the Year Award.

6. Shaquille O'Neal

Shaq was one of the most dominate players in the NBA he is 7'1". He has four NBA titles.

1. Stephen Curry

Steph is my favorite player. He is a 2015 NBA champ. He beat LeBron James, and is a 2015 MVP and a three point sniper.

Spotlight on the 2016 Rio Summer Olympics

The City of Rio De Janeiro

By Gabby L.

Rio is a beautiful city from its historic landmarks to its glistening white beaches. Keep reading to hear more about this incredible city!

Historic Landmarks

One of the most famous statues in the world is the Christ the Redeemer statue in Rio de Janeiro. It is made of soapstone and is 98 feet tall making it the fifth tallest statue of Jesus in the whole world. It took nine years to build and weighs 635 metric tons. It was created by French sculptor Paul Landowski, engineer Heitor da Silva Costa Brazil, and French engineer Albert Caquot. People come from all around the world to see this amazing statue.

Mountainous Terrain

Rio is also known for its wonderful mountains like Sugarloaf and Corcovado. They have amazing views, and Sugarloaf is a great place to ski. Sugarloaf is 220 meters above sea level and has an amazing 360 degree view of Rio de Janeiro. Corcovado is 2,310 feet tall. It is mostly known for its amazing statue, Christ the Redeemer stands on its summit.

History

Rio de Janeiro means 'River of January' which is a fitting name as Portuguese rulers were the first ones to touch the land on January 1, 1502. The bay formed on the opening of a river hence the name.

Many other countries wanted to take possession of Rio as it was in an excellent port for exporting gold and diamonds. When the Portuguese finally left, Brazil finally gained its independence from them.

Rio Summer Olympics 2016

By Adam and Emma K

In the Summer Olympics there are many sports including swimming, gymnastics, track and field, and pole vault. The Olympics occur every two years switching between summer and winter. Rio De Janeiro is in Brazil on the continent of South America.

Some people who most likely have a spot in the Olympics are Simone Niles. She is 18 years old and is considered the top gymnast in the nation. There is also Michael Phelps. He is the top swimmer in the nation, and he eats at least 12,000 calories each day! Usain Bolt is a six-time Olympic gold medalist who will be competing again on the track.

The Olympic rings stand for the five areas of the world: North and South America (considered one area), Africa, Australia, Asia, and Europe.

The Waters of Rio De Janeiro Are Not So Clean After All

By Rayna A.

The Rio De Janeiro waters are definitely not clean for the 2016 Summer Olympics. Tests were done and it was discovered that Rio waters are 1.7 million times the level of what would be considered dangerous in the U.S.

John Griffith, a marine biologist, says, "What you have there is basically raw sewage. It's all the water from the toilets and the showers and whatever people put down their sinks, all mixed up, and it's going into the beach waters."

As a result the swimmers, boaters, and all of the athletes who are doing water sports are at a risk of getting sick or already sick from training.

The Rio Olympic Organizing Committee says that they will have the waters clean when the Olympics come around! Let's hope that's true!

The Rodrigo de Freitas Lake in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

ELDEST By Christopher Paolini (Spoiler Alert!)

By Roland C.

Characters: Eragon, the dragon rider; Saphira, the dragon; Arya, the elf; Nasuada, King of the Vardens; Glader, the oldest dragon; Oromis, Glader's rider; Rohan, Eragon's cousin; and Katrina, Rohan's girlfriend.

Setting: Du Weldenvarden and Fathen Dur, both imaginary lands of the Middle Ages.

Summary: After the great victory with the Vardens, Eragon travels to Du Weldenvarden, an elf city, with Arya and Saphira so he and Saphira can train with Oromis and Glader to become a better Dragon Rider. Eragon joins the Blood-Oath celebration. Then something magical happens: Eragon turns into a human/elf! Also, every scar he ever had was healed and gone. Back at home, Rohan rouses the villagers to move and join the Vardens, save Katrina, and destroy the Ra'zacs. Then, the empire strikes back with an army of 10,000 troops. Eragon, Saphira and Arya rush to join the fight! During this epic battle, apparently there's a new Dragon Rider, and he is a bad one. Eragon fights against him, and manages to pull off his opponent's helmet to reveal Murtagh. Murtagh then tells Eragon a secret: that they are brothers, both sons of Morzan; Murtagh lets Eragon go this time. Luckily, the Vardens end up winning the war at the story's conclusion.

I think the message was about bravery, because Eragon chose to fight in a deadly war.

The Hunger Games By Suzanne Collins (Spoiler Alert!)

By Roland C.

The main characters in the Hunger Games are: Katniss Everdeen, the "Girl on Fire!," Peeta Mellark, who ends up falling in love with Katniss; Haymitch, Peeta and Katniss' mentor; and Gale, Katniss' hunting buddy and friend.

What happened in this book: Katniss Everdeen and Peeta Mellark are summoned from District 12 to play in the Hunger Games, a fight to the death in a horrifying arena, as punishment for fighting the Capitol. But, in the interview, Peeta announces he's madly in love with Katniss. Thanks to this, the Capitol (they run the Hunger Games) bends the rules and allows two tributes from the same district to live; Peeta and Katniss make it out alive.

Summary: The main characters, Peeta and Katniss, get called to be in the Hunger Games, which is a punishment on the citizens for fighting the Capitol. The star-crossed lovers end up winning the game together.

I give this book a 10 star rating because it's action-packed and an emotional story.

Nine Awesome Pranks

By Hannah K., Rayna A., Abby M.

Here are some awesome pranks to do at home with your family!

Minty Oreos — scrape the middle of the Oreos and replace it with toothpaste.

Happy Fridge — Take craft googly eyes and stick them on everything in your fridge.

Candy Onions — Take some onions and put caramel on them, and it will look like a caramel apple!

Asparagus Birthday — Tell your parents you are in charge of the b-day cake and surprise the b-day girl or boy with an asparagus cake.

Air Horn Door — Right where your lock is, tape an air horn to it the door. It will open and the air horn will sound.

Pasta and Hot Sauce — Take pasta and instead of marinara, use hot sauce. They won't know until they take a bite.

Coke and Ketchup — When you get a coke for someone, stick a pack of ketchup and put a straw in. (make sure you hide the ketchup deep enough so they cannot see it. Don't stick it all the way in.) The first sip will be pure ketchup.

McDonalds Mix Up — get someone a package of chicken nuggets, but fill it with veggies.

Mayonnaise Doughnut — Get a jelly doughnut and try to take out the jelly. Then, fill with mayonnaise.

A Cruel Explorer: Hernán Cortés

By Roland C.

The Man's Life Story

Cortés was born in 1485 in Medellín, Spain. Growing up as a farm boy Cortés had a thirst of adventure. Cortés went to college at age 14 to study so he could be a sailor. He lived in Cuba. In 1518 Cortés was promoted captain general chief of Spain's army. Cortés married Catalina Yu'arez. He moved to Santo Domingo in 1504.

ers. They defeated the Aztecs in 1521. Cortés traveled by ship. Cortés traveled for Spain to get land for Spain and gold and silver. Cortés returned to Spain in 1540.

Cortés's Challenges

His motivation was being famous and rich. One challenge for this man was conquering the Aztecs. Yes land was found for his country. No Aztecs survived his attack. In these attacks he captured Montezuma. Cortés died on December 2, 1547.

That's the life of the cruel explorer Hernan Cortés the destroyer of the Aztecs.

The Voyage to Mexico

Cortés was 34 in 1519 when he traveled to present day Mexico. It was his first voyage. Cortés traveled around Mexico / New World. He met with a lot of Indian chiefs who wanted to overthrow the amazing empire and the Aztec lead-Hoverboards; Explode?

By Carter H. and Niko S.

This is the ride of the future, or is it? Imagine you are riding the coolest thing ever, and all of a sudden, it explodes! So cool! These hoverboards explode with fire at random moments. Also, they don't actually hover. It's just when you're on it, it feels like you're hovering, but you're not.

You may be thinking we still want it. Well, if you want to catch on fire, sure you can spend $1,000 for one. This is our opinion (you do not have to have the same one). Hopefully the company will be making a hoverboard that doesn't explode!

Fun Facts: Guess what? Amazon, Target and many other stores will not sell it because of "safety reasons."

Also, when you are riding it or charging it, or even putting it in a random place it can explode. Wow! Mind Blown! If you charge it for too long (over three hours) it can catch fire and/or explode.

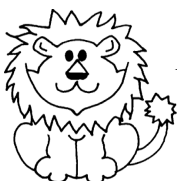

The choice is up to you!
(Make a safe one!)

Li'l Bub

Maru

Li'l Bub is a very curious cat. Her tongue sticks out, and she has a form of cat dwarfism. Many people call her "the most amazing cat on the planet." Due to her dwarfism, she will stay kitten size for her whole life. There is a lot of Bub merchandise. She is also on some talk shows. Why is she the most amazing cat on the planet? Read the table below to find out more!

Maru or "the box cat" is very funny. He will go in boxes bigger or smaller than him. Every time he sees a box he has to go in it. He is on many YouTube videos, such as "Maru's Greatest Hits." Unfortunately, he does not have as much merchandise like Bub. Why? It's because he lives in Japan. His YouTube channel is Mugumogu. His owner usually puts a head sized hole in the box and draws human hair on it. So, when Maru comes in he pokes his head through the hole.

Has her own website.

Has more than 1,000 Likes on some of his videos.

Has her own BUB store (li'l bub's li'l shop.)

Has 514,000 subscribers on YouTube.

Usually cats have 18 toes on their feet. But bub has 22!

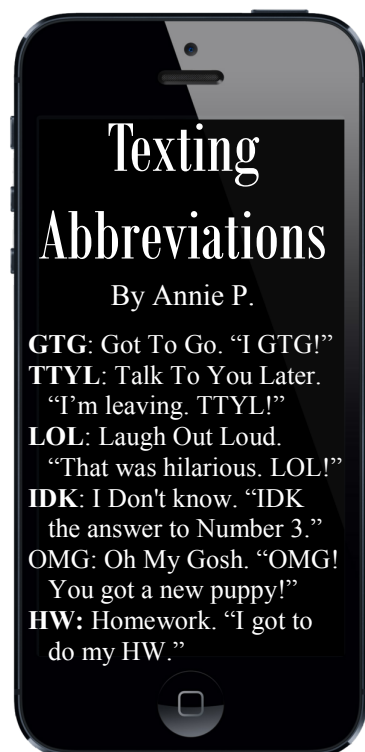

Maru can go into boxes that are 3 times smaller than him!

She has a sibling named Norbert the dog. Norbert also sticks out his tongue.

Maru can go in a box and stay there for a LONG time.

Xbox One Vs. PS4

By Amaris W.

The Xbox One is better than PS4 because it's 2016 right now and the PS4 doesn't have many games out. But the Xbox does, and it has a lot of kid games out. Plus everyone pretty much likes the Xbox in this school. There is about, I think, 52 Xbox games.

The PS4 only has one game really and not many people have the PS4, but a lot of people have the Xbox. If you want an Xbox, you should get one because it's awesome.

Did you know the Xbox was originally made in 2005, and then revealed on May 21, 2013?

The Xbox One allows you to watch live TV you can use Skype on the Xbox One but not on the PS4.

The PS4 is better because the Xbox loads really, really, really slowly sometimes. The PS4 loads fast even on sleep mode.

Did you know that the PS4 was made on February 20, 2013, and it was launched on November 29, 2013?

Online people love the PS4 more than the Xbox. The PS4 is cheaper than the Xbox right now. The PS4 can let you have more storage. It can also let you be hooked up to Cable TV. Some other people only like the PS4 because the way it sounds when it starts.

The PS4 has been making a lot of kid games lately so don't give up on the PS4 yet because it's just getting started.

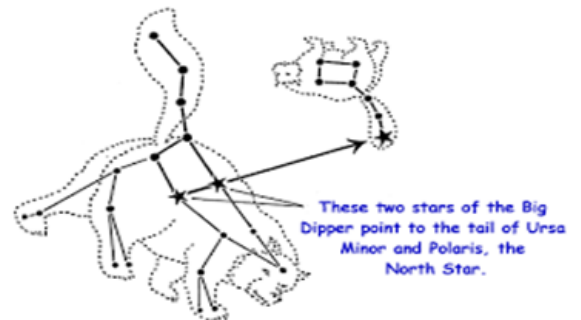

Cool Constellations

Starting Up a Fish Tank

Saltwater vs. Freshwater

By Sammy K.

Have you ever thought that having a fish tank maybe cool but seems like too much work or too much money? I can tell you that that is not true.

Step One: Selecting a Tank

There are three factors to think about when selecting a tank. First is budget, how much money you have. You can get small fish bowl for $5 or a giant 200 gallon tank for $5,000. Second is where the tank is going or the dimensions of the area it is going in. If you have a lot of money, but not a lot of space, then you cannot put in a large tank. Third is what kind of fish are going in the tank. Certain fish need more room than others or different kinds of water, like if you want tangs or motoro stingrays; different fish need different kinds of water, like fresh or salt.

Step Two: Selecting Filtration

In the ocean or in lakes natural proteins (poop) that come from the things living there scatter around the vast space of the marine environment not causing any problems. However, a fish tank is not so vast and widespread, so there is nowhere for the proteins to go. This is why you buy a filter and a protein skimmer. Make sure that when you buy your filter, it must coordinate with the tank's amount of gallons in your tank (ex: if the filter says 50 gal and your tank is 50 gal that is not good enough). A bigger filter is better because your tank will be cleaner, your fish will be healthier, and you will have to clean the tank less. This is because a filter grows bacteria to kill ammonia. If your filter creates four bacteria and your fish create five ammonia, this tank is unhealthy and unsafe for fish. So I recommend buying a filter that is designed for a larger tank. A protein skimmer takes the fish poop and removes it from the water. Generally protein skimmers are sized by small, medium, large, etc. or one size fits all.

Step Three: Selecting Fish

When selecting fish you must find out the size of your tank and the type of water (salt, brackish, or fresh). Freshwater fish are fairly hardy and can live in smaller tanks. Brackish fish are cool because they live in waters that aren't super salty but are usually murky, but they generally need big tanks. Salt is my personal favorite because the fish are very vibrant and exotic. These tanks have beautiful corals and live rock. You also have to determine if you want an aggressive tank with aggressive fish or a peaceful tank with peaceful fish. Budget is also an important thing because it isn't unlikely to hear of a koi fish that sold for $100,000.

Eels of the Sea

By Milana P.

One type of ocean animal is an eel. Eels come in many different shapes and sizes.

One type is the ribbon eel. The ribbon eel is larger than most eels. It can be blue or sometimes black and yellow.

Some eels can be pets, but you mostly you will not find them in pet stores you will have to get them at a different place or order them.

Another eel is the Yellow Spotted Moray. They are black and yellow. They are not as long as the ribbon eel though. They bite only when you are bothering it.

One more eel is the Viper Moray. The viper has a painful bite. The color of them is a red and brown color.

Trapped In Jamaa, Volume 3

By Emily S. and Ashlyn G.

It was beautiful the next morning. Infinity and Flora had camped in a hole at the bottom of a thick tree, just big enough to fit two teeny-tiny raccoons. Infinity was the first to awaken. As she stood, she could see the brilliant rays of sunlight peek in through the hole. Careful not to make a sound, Infinity crept out of the hole.

Outside was stunning. The tall trees seemed to grow thin, and randomly more open space appeared. Sunlight blazed through the treetops, seeming to ignite the world with its fiery warm welcome. Infinity's fur blew gently in the wind, especially spiking up her tail. Today, we need to leave, She thought. And soon.

Meanwhile, Flora had just awoken in the tiny hole. She rubbed the sleep out of her tiny eyes and hopped outside. To her surprise, Infinity was already up. The grey fox stood proudly, gazing up at the sun with her back to Flora.

"Ahem," Flora said.

Infinity shook the dew off of her pelt and turned to Flora.

"Oh, hi," she said, with a nervous touch to her voice.

"Awake so soon?" Flora wiggled her stubby tail in delight.

"My mom always says I get up early," she grinned.

But something was clearly troubling Infinity.

"What's wrong?"

Flora asked sympathetically.

"Nothing," Infinity snapped. She jerked her head away and padded ahead.

Then, she broke into a wild run.

"Wait up!" Flora called.

Infinity felt like she had been running for ages. It was already somewhere around noon, and the two had just entered Crystal Sands. It was a beautiful sandy beach with two twisting water slides. Three empty beach towels lay near the Juice Hut, seeming to be free of sand. Flora made a rough halt in front of the water. Infinity suddenly leapt underwater, splashing Flora's furry face. The rabbit shook it off lightly and looked into the water. It shimmered in the eternal sunlight, sparkles illuminating it like fireflies. But underwater, a brown, small figure spiraled around. Flora blinked once, then again. The figure was still there. Closer to the surface, this time. Flora leapt away just in time to see a brown otter soar upwards. Higher, higher, higher...

Now, the otter was transforming. It flew into the sky and spread its front legs out. Suddenly, a small green tornado formed around it. The green light soon illuminated the entire beach. Flora had to cover her eyes to prevent herself from being blinded. When she took her paw away from her eyes, a gigantic eagle was cawing and screeching in the skies. The green light was gone. But a nametag floated beneath the eagle. It said, "Infinity Windystar." For sure, this was Infinity.

"Get down from there! I'm tired of chasing you," Flora called.

Infinity swooped down in a flash, nearly cutting Flora with one of her razor sharp talons. And in a flash [and a green light] Infinity was back to normal. But just then, they were both underwater and they were still land animals.

"There is a hacker nearby," Flora said blandly.

"No doubt," Infinity replied casually.

Just then, they were both back on land, soaking wet.

"If we're in a video game... HOW THE FLIP ARE WE WET?!?!?!?" screamed Flora.

Infinity shook the water off her thick, water-filled pelt.

"Who knows," she sighed, shaking her head.

Flora shook the water out of her fur. She started to lick Infinity's back.

"What are you doing?" asked Infinity.

"Don't you remember the Warrior Cats? They share tongues. Lick, a.k.a.

clean each other's pelts." Flora answered.

"What do we--" Flora started but got cut off by something in the crystal, white sand trying to get out.

"AHHHHH!!!!!! I'M SCARED!!!!!! HIDE ME!!!!!!" Flora screeched.

A wolf came out of the sand. It was very faint so you couldn't tell what it looked like. And the scariest part was... it had no nametag.

"AHHHHHHH!!!!!! WE ARE ALL GOING TO DIE!!!!!!!!!!" Flora said not knowing what was going on.

She went behind Infinity.

The wolf tilted her head and said: "So Blooming, er-- I guess Flora, we meet again."

Her voice was the creepiest the two have ever heard.

"It... it... it's..." Flora said scaredly. "THE NEW JAMMER!!!!!!!!!" she couldn't say the newjammer because she did not have free chat.

"Ahhh... thank goodness she can only scam... Wait just a dang second..." Flora gasped. How could she have free chat now?

Thenewjammer disappeared and reappeared behind them. Flora disappeared with thenewjammer. Infinity was there all alone. Could Flora be gone forever?

Flora woke up lying on a leather bed tied up with belts. She saw thenewjammer sharpening her claws. Flora did a silent gasp. She was in something like an old garage or old metal shack-like thing. Flora closed her eyes as she saw thenewjammer turn around with sharp, knife like claws. She was still very faint looking. Flora pretended to sleep.

"WAKE UP BL--ER, FLORA!!!!!" thenewjammer shouted in Flora's ear.

Flora could hear the blood roaring in her ears. Flora opened her eyes. The-newjammer was prodding Flora's chest to stomach with her sharp claws.

"You should really eat," thenewjammer said.

Flora felt thenewjammer's claw pressure getting stronger and stronger. Then a microwave timer dinged. "Oh!!! I will be back you... um... Flora!"

Infinity started to look around for a possible hideout place where the-newjammer and Flora could be. She looked around for about an hour. She then looked at the sand.

"Am I dumb or was I just not thinking?" Infinity barked to herself blandly. And with that she dug about 212 holes. No secret entrance.

Flora tried to unbuckle the belts but she couldn't! The belts got tighter and tighter each time she tried.

Ok, Flora, you should stop or you can never get out. Flora thought to herself.

She was even more scared than a baby ant about to get crushed. Flora saw the-newjammer coming back with lightly toasted brown turkey. And for some reason she threw it out. Was she going to eat Flora? Flora blacked out as the-newjammer sat down in front of her.

Infinity went into the Juice Hut for a drink. She took a banana smoothie. She sat down on the stage and she fell right down. It was pitch black. She was a fox so... she sniffed her way. She started to smell like some rust or dust from old wood. She banged her head on a metal trash can. It was lights out for her.

When Flora woke up she saw thenewjammer at her microwave again. Flora noticed a stormy gray fox body at the trash can knocked out! She realized that it was Infinity! Thenewjammer must have picked up her scent because she walked up to her and looked.

Flora screeched "MR. PUMPKIN-BANANA-FACE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" And with that, Infinity looked up at the same time thenewjammer did.

"Whoa, whoa, whoa, hold on a second!" Infinity cried.

She leapt upright and locked eyes with the-newjammer. Infinity's fur bristled high, and her tail twitched tensely from side to side.

"So it's you," the fox growled. "The penguin who scammed my friend."

"She wasn't a penguin when she hacked me,"

Flora corrected, but instantly the-newjammer gagged her.

"Mmmph!!! Shrrv mrrr!!!!" Infinity's ears flattened.

She growled, stalking up to thenewjammer with elegant silence. The mysterious wolf chuckled and pointed to the microwave.

"Hungry? I have some chicken legs and wings just for you," thenewjammer cackled.

"This is just a dumb old repeat of Hansel and Gretel," Infinity snapped.

At that moment, she leapt up into the air and slashed thenewjammer with her claws. The wolf was thrown back, but rose and slammed Infinity against a wall.

"Oof!" Infinity collapsed near the wall, shakily rising with legs spread out wide.

Flora watched as the battle continued on. She sighed and closed her eyes.

When will I ever go home again? My mom will be wondering, Flora thought sadly. The very fact forced tears upon her eyes.

Suddenly, Infinity yowled and sprang at Flora. Flora was frozen still. Infinity was going to kill her! At the speed of light, the fox unlatched every leather belt.

"I'm free! Now we can destroy this beast," Flora smirked.

Together, the two leapt forward and circled the-newjammer. The wolf lashed her tail and bared enormous teeth, but Infinity and Flora were too angry to notice. They moved in closer until the-newjammer finally took a swipe at both of them. With astounding speed, the two dashed away and closed in again.

Finally, thenewjammer sprang upwards and pinned the two down with either one of her paws.

"This," she said. "Is your last day living."

Thenewjammer's jaws were almost to Flora's throat. Flora whimpered with pain. Infinity finally decided to do something. Infinity bit the-newjammer's paw. She nodded to Flora, signaling her to do the same. Then at the same time the two flung her back into a wall. Flora clawed her throat. But it did very little, so she bit thenewjammer's throat, still not doing a lot. Infinity started to bite thenewjammer's throat.

"Go bite her leg instead!" Infinity suggested, so Flora did.

"Fine!" she coughed in a raspy voice. "I'll send back her items!"

Just then, a letter floated towards Flora. Icons of her stolen rares flew into her chest, until they were all nothing. Then Infinity and Flora let go of thenewjammer, still pinning her to the ground.

"I'll be back with more," thenewjammer hissed, and then she was gone.

Adventures of the Felines, Volume 2

By Emily S.

Bramble awoke on the back of something... wooly. He felt something long and wooly as well in front of him vibrate and lower itself. Once Bramble's vision cleared, he could see that he was on the back of a grazing llama.

This is my chance! I have to make food! Bramble thought rebelliously.

Then, he stood up and started digging through the llama's wool until he found its skin beneath. As he was about to dig in, an unconscious Shade tumbled into the petting zoo and flopped onto the llama's neck. The llama didn't seem to mind, though. It just kept munching on the hay all over the ground.

"Shade, wake up!" Bramble yowled, nudging the silver tabby's limp body.

The lean she-cat's eyes fluttered open. She wobbled to her feet, then collapsed again. Bramble lifted Shade and let her lean against his side.

"We're alive,"

Bramble whispered, "don't you see?"

Shade closed her eyes and gave no response.

"Wake up!" Bramble yowled.

The llama the two cats were standing on lifted its head, shifted around, and began grazing again. Bramble found this quite disturbing, but he wasn't focused on the llama he was supposed to catch.

"Shade, I know you're with me," he meowed in a voice full of painful sorrow.

Then, Bramble set down Shade on the wooliest part of the llama's back and let her lay on her side. Shade's breathing was slow and shallow.

"SHADE!!!" Bramble wailed, crying up to the skies blocked by a tent roof.

When he looked back at Shade, she was laying limp and unmoving. Maybe it would be temporary, but still...

Now what do I do? Bramble thought, tears spilling from his eyes. I've just lost my best friend, and I can't even catch a mouse!

After this sudden incident, will Bramble and his colony survive their unquenched hunger and eternal sadness? Was Shade really gone? Read the next article to find out!

The Great Adventures of the Queen of Doughnut Land

By Caroline F.

Once upon a doughnut, the Queen of Doughnut Land was sitting in her secret cave when she received a call.

"Doughnut Land is under attack!" Shouted a random civilian through the speaker.

"Oh no!" The Queen yelled. She grabbed her bow and arrow and ran out the door.

Outside, she jumped on her motorbike. As she rode into town, she saw a giant piece of pie smashing all of the buildings! She tried shooting it with her bow and arrow, but it didn't damage it at all.

She rode her bike over to the emergency building and grabbed the magical instruction booklet. It said that to defeat the giant piece of pie, she needed to sing triple karaoke.

She got her friends, The President of Cake Land and The Emporous of Ice Cream Topia. They ran to a stage and sang a bunch of Taylor Swift music. Sure enough, the giant piece of pie fell to the ground, defeated.

Doughnut Land was free thanks to the Queen and her friends.

Episode 6 1/2 : The Rise of the First Order

By Aidan N.

A long time ago,
in a galaxy far, far away...

The brave REBEL ALLIANCE has called upon the farthest reaches of the galaxy for back-up in their battle against the newborn FIRST ORDER. The First Order has already begun their attack on the REPUBLIC from the inside, a charge led by ex-Jedi Knight Darth Adoribll. With guidance of the evil Supreme Leader, Kylo Ren has risen to power. Thankfully, the message has reached Mutter's Spiral, a faraway galaxy. Even more thankfully, a man named The Doctor and a woman named Mary Poppins have received this message...

On Jakku, a mysterious blue box materializes in the distance.

Vrromp, Vrromp, VRRRROOOOMMP!

A man with a floppy hat and colorful scarf steps out of the box, and walks towards a small circle of water.

"Clever, very clever..." he whispers to himself.

He knocks loudly on the small island in the middle of it.

"Hallo? Hallooo? I got your message! Your dis-trepreneur signal?

You're the Rebel Alliance, right? It said to meet you on the small island of Jakku!" he turns angrily, when the wind whips up and he hears a friendly female voice from above.

"Hallo!" she says, looking down at the man.

The man looks up and smiles.

"Mary Poppins!" he shouts, waving.

"Hallo, Doctor!" she shouts back.

She lands softly on sand, thanks to her umbrella.

Without them realizing, a hatch opens up on the small island, and a Rebel Alliance scope-gun pokes out.

"Freeze!" shouts the man with the weapon. Mary and the Doctor stop talking, turn towards the island, and put their hands up. "You was sayin' you gots the message?"

The Doctor and Mary Poppins look towards the man nervously.

"Umm...yes. My name is the Doctor, and-"

Mary Poppins jumps in front of him. "And my name is Mary Poppins!"

The Doctor nods his head slowly in disgust of Mary's over-excitement.

"Mary, you have to stop doing that," said the Doctor. "It's giving me a headache."

Mary turns towards the Time Lord and flaps her scarf in his face.

"You're just jelly because you're old." She turns towards the man again and shouts. "Tally-ho! Lead the way!"

The Doctor nods his head and reluctantly follows them.

"I'm getting too old for this..." he says as they go down the dark shaft.

Meanwhile...

In the Star Destroyer of the First Order, Kylo Ren meets with Darth Adoribll.

"Good evening, Darth Adoribll." The silicone shiba looks at Kylo with red, glowing eyes.

"Yes, it is a 'good evening', isn't it? Muhmm." the evil cyber-shiba turns a full circle in his spinney chair, squinting due to all the light.

"Mr. Ren, I have heard that...you let a....'message', get through the firewall. Much wow. Very impressed. Much wow, indeed." He looks at Kylo more angrily, growling softly. The cyber-shiba jumps up onto the table, and lifts his paw. Kylo flies into the air against his will, and is smashed into the back wall. "Do not fail me again."

Back at the Rebel base...

The man leads the Doctor and Mary Poppins through the dark sewer, and he tells them the current situation, especially of Darth Adoribll.

"Adoribll? Rings a bell..." says the Doctor, avoiding the grime and such with great skill. Mary, on the other hand, was simply kicking it out of the way.

"Rings about three, to me." she says, jumping over a small crack. "Are we almost there yet?" she says impatiently.

"Yee, just 'bout." replies the man.

They find themselves at the end of the sewer, with a small curtain in front of them. He pulls it back, revealing a beautiful city. The Doctor stares wide-eyed.

"This...this looks just like Gallifrey. Hmm...smells just like it too." He sees a flight of stairs, and runs down it with excitement, with the man close behind.

Reluctantly, Mary follows them. "I'm getting too old for this..." she says quietly. The Doctor hears her and shouts back; "You're just jelly because you're old."

In the meeting room, Poe gets to meet Mary and the Doctor.

"Hello. I'm Poe, head of the Flying Unit. Glad ta' meetcha."

The Doctor and Mary introduce themselves, and why they were there. Suddenly, the TARDIS begins to appear.

"TARDIS!" shouts the Doctor. "I almost forgot you!" he rushes towards the machine and hugs it tight.

However, the door bursts open, revealing Stormtroopers, Kylo Ren, Darth Adoribll and a few First Order Probe Droids.

"TARDIS, why? How could you??” the Doctor shouts, getting off the floor.

“The ‘TARDIS did not do anything.” said the silicone-shiba, lifting his paw. He dropped his paw to the ground, forcing everyone to drop. Everyone, except Mary Poppins.

“Wha...what? How come...?” Darth Adoribll does this motion again and again.

“Your magic-Forcey stuff does not work on a magician! Ha!” shouts Mary Poppins, pulling her umbrella out of her magic bag.

“Grab a weapon!

‘Tis time I beat something up!” she says, opening her umbrella and wielding it like a sword.

“I-I’m...not sure you want to do that, Miss Poppins...” says the Doctor weakly.

She thrusts the umbrella like a rapier towards Kylo and Adoribll, but is blocked by the sudden appearance of six double-sided lightsabers.

“Umm...uh oh,” she mutters, before being pushed back by a barrage of attacks.

She jumps for cover, and the Doctor flings his Sonic Screwdriver towards Mary Poppins. She catches it mid-air, and presses the button. The TARDIS’ lights begin to glow, and the First Order-ins disappear into the phasing.

Vrrromp! Vrrromp! VRRRRRROMP!

Everyone hobbles off the ground, aching from the power of the Force. The Doctor walks towards Mary, and they both realize who the metal canine is.

“Doc-doctor...th-that w-was...” she cries from fear, and the Doctor finishes her thought.

“Yes, my old friend. That...that was Doge.”

The Night of No One Home

By Jackie K.

It was a fall night and three friends, Jacob, Emma, and Neil, were at the town fair “Do you want to come to my house?” asked Neil.

“Sure!” they said.

Two minutes later they got to Neil’s house and Jacob skipped ahead yelling “Hurry up already!”

They all crept into Neil’s old mansion

Neil yelled “Mom, Dad I’m home!”

In a brief second they heard Neil’s earsplitting voice echoing throughout the house no one answered they all knew they were gone.

They ran outside to speak to each other. They were frightened. Everywhere they went looking for the parents and they were so worried and terrified. Jacob, Emma, and Neil decided to split up. They looked almost everywhere. They met at Neil’s house to tell the answers if they found them or not.

They looked at each other one by one but they each said “I couldn’t find them.”

They went to the graveyard. It was the only place they hadn’t looked yet, but still had no chance they would find them there. They walked around for a little bit then they heard their names echoing out to them and followed the voice.

Suddenly they saw the parents tied up to one of the gravestones and ran up to help them. Jacob saw a metal spring behind one of the gravestones. He grabbed it and ran back to the gravestone Neil’s parents were tied up to. He took the edge of the spring and rubbed it up against the rope until it broke. They all got out safely and didn’t go back again.

Mr. Taco and the Magical Quest

By Annie P. and Camille W.

Once upon a time there lived a taco named Mr. Taco. He is a living, talking, and GIANT taco. We join him on a quest to find his friend Mr. O.J. Burger (who got eaten by a GINORMOUS cyclops named Joe the Hobbit) with Gary the ghost.

“How long is the climb up this giant beanstalk?” Mr. Taco asked.

“I don’t know or care because I’m not climbing.” Garry responded.

As they were climbing they heard a mysterious grumble. Wait that was just Mr. Taco’s stomach. Then they heard THE SOUND!

“Fe Fi Fo I smell a ghost and a TACO!!!” yelled the cyclops.

The two ran down the beanstalk with incredible speed and chopped down the beanstalk.

“Wait!! What about Mr. O.J. Burger?” asked Gary.

“How about we just know that he is in a happy place now.” Mr. Taco asked.

“Ok.” Gary replied.

“You know... I could just yell up there and ask for Mr. O.J. Burger back. HEY!!! GIVE THAT GIANT BURGER BACK!!!!”

“OK! I never liked him anyways!” the cyclops replied.

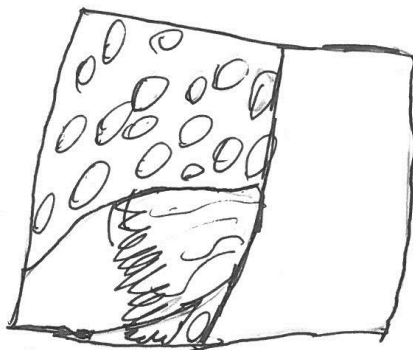

“That was surprisingly easy!”

Mr. P. Bunny: The Classic Stories

By Landon N.

The first MPB story you read wasn't the first one made... Here are the first two stories! (So that I'm not fired and get more money for remembering these for the last four years and putting in two stories.)

Mr. P. Bunny Looks for Soda Pop.

One day Mr. P. Bunny was in Micro City when he felt thirsty. He was in the mood for soda, so he went out to search for pop. First, he looked in a tree, but there was no soda. Then, he looked in the sewers, with no luck of pop. Next, he looked at a car and the driver shooed him off saying that soda could be found at the pop store. Lastly, he went to the soda store and got his pop. The soda was yummy!

The End

Mr. P. Bunny Looks for a Fireplace in the North Pole.

Mr. P. Bunny was in the Arctic looking for a fireplace. He looked for one left and right and up and down and tfel and thgir and pu and nwod and diagonal and ways you wouldn't believe. He looked for a car to tell him where to go, but there was none in the North Pole.

"Where in the Arctic could a fireplace be?" he asked himself. So, he came back home with no fireplace but a heater.

The End

Wait... why would the kindergarden me right such a sad story? This is Mr. P. Bunny stories we're talking about! Time to fix this.

Mr. P. Bunny! I am the narrator! You will meet me in the future, but I am here to fix your story!

"You should have quotation marks." Is this better?: "Mr. P. Bunny! I am the narrator! You will meet me in the future, but I am here to fix your story! Go back to the North Pole and keep looking!"

"To the Arctic!"

Now I have to place a fireplace there! Now let's see this story.

Mr. P. Bunny Looks for a Fireplace in the Arctic.

Peanut Bunny was in the North Pole looking for a fireplace to roast marshmallows. He looked for it up and down and left and right and pu and nwod and tfel and thgir and ways beyond your brain storage. He tried talking to a car, but found it was a polar bear. Then he saw something, a fireplace with marshmallows! Then he roasted the fireplace over the marshmallows and ate it all.

The End

Wait... that is 3 stories! I get more money! and because the 3rd was an alternate version... MORE MONEY!!! YAY!! I can finally get out of this job and become a duck! Merry Halloween to all huskies!
